Tee shirts tell it like it is when it comes to emotions

In a recent issue of this enewsletter I mentioned how I sent Jon Gosselin of the reality TV show Jon and Kate Plus 8 a tee shirt with a statement Jon spontaneously made on the show that was unintentionally funny. "I don't like the way emotions make me feel," Jon said when he was describing how he doesn't like to show his emotions. The statement was both funny and clever, enough so that I put it on a few dozen shirts. It has been hit among folks who not only relate to the statement but understand its humor. My friend Beth, for instance, had to give the shirt to her husband Rick for his birthday, seeing that he is not one to enjoy the way his emotions make him feel either.

Let me know if you're interested in one of these shirts. Cost is $15 for a short-sleeved tee, $20 for a long-sleeved tee. Only a few remain so act now! Email me at Suzette@SuzetteBoulais.com.

I was contacted by my friend Roger Monroe to design some thank you cards for donors who contributed to the Greater Peoria Sports Hall of Fame. Here is the notecard which is a takeoff on the official black and white Hall of Fame logo. "Suzette's clean and colorful design was just what I was looking for," remarked Roger. "If you need some specialty notecards, Suzette's your designer."

Paintings showcased in urban industrial home

My friend Lee Anne from high school was urban industrial before urban industrial was cool.

In her converted warehouse near the downtown area of Indianapolis, Indiana, are a variety of mementos and souvenirs she's collected over the years that give her home a warm, personal touch. When I presented Lee Anne with two pieces of original artwork over a recent holiday, it was an honor to discover that Lee Anne placed my two abstract paintings of the sun beside a framed musical score written by her younger brother, David.

If you'd like me to paint some original art to give your home a personal touch, contact me at Suzette@SuzetteBoulais.com.
