Suzette's artwork inspires a birthday poem

MoonDancer

Every year another panoply of color on paper
Lightly brushed as a moment remembered

Sometimes golden sometimes silver
Sometimes magically embossed

And how do you do that, exactly?

Where does imagination come from?
How do you describe color to the blind?

Do sounds have colors?
Designs sometimes whisper when they should shout,
or cry, when they should be singing,
or smile instead of laughing.

When you see a design on paper, put your lips together
and make the sound you see.

That sound can be a single note, a cuatro, a refrain or an entire symphony.
Vocalize what you see, as the image moves you.

What I hear is music, don't you?
