This month, we're all Irish, so remember to think green

Fondly, I remember the summer I visited New York City to see Julie Andrews in the Broadway production of Victor, Victoria. At one of the local eateries near the theatre, I struck up a conversation with the restaurant manager who told me a favorite event at his establishment was St. Patrick's Day. "We call it St. Patsy's Day and we only play Patsy Cline music," he said. Sounds like a clever St. Patrick's Day spin to me. If your group is looking for a Peoria sweatshirt with an Irish spin, email me at Suzette@SuzetteBoulais.com for personal orders.

A touch of inspiration: Why the sun is in my skies

No doubt, a theme has emerged. More and more suns are making their way into my paintings. It must be because I see the sun as such a symbol of hope - and a little hope on everyone's walls, whether it be at home or at the office, has to be a good thing. Maybe I'll end up like that artist who paints only weather scenes with storms brewing and lightning striking. If you would like one of my sun paintings to brighten up your space, email me at Suzette@SuzetteBoulais.com.

Let's talk logos _____

Need some notecards with your logo on it?

Jim Spears, owner of Jimmy's Bar, enjoys personal notecards

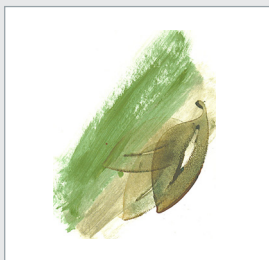

Could you or your business use a set of my tailor-made notecards?

Here is an image I used on some notecards I designed for Jim Spears, owner of Jimmy's Bar, that are a slight take off on his official bar logo. The only real difference is that my shamrock incorporates more pronounced green hearts.

Over the years, Jimmy has surprised me now and then with a music CD he thinks I'll like. And every now and then I'll drop him off a new set of notecards at his bar. Which reminds me, it's notecard time for Jimmy.
