New artwork on display at Peoria Heights shop

The movie, The Sound of Music, has long been a childhood favorite and this holiday season I paid homage to it by painting the 24" x 36" inch image you see to the far right that is presently on display at Emerson Creek Pottery in Peoria Heights, Illinois.

Also at the shop is another 24" x 36" painting, "Where This Soul Belongs," which pays homage to the fact that it is by the beach and water in a warm, sunny climate where I feel I most belong.

The next time you're in Peoria Heights, please stop by Emerson Creek to see these new pieces and purchase some beautiful pottery while you're there.

Holy COW: Suzette's graphic design is on display at Spotted Cow restaurant

Anyone who's been to The Spotted Cow ice cream shop and eatery in Peoria, Illinois, knows that throughout the entire establishment is a spotted cow art motif. The shop's logo as well as light fixtures, chairs, and floor tiles all include distinctive black and white cow spots that coincide perfectly with the shop's name. To add my own contribution to the shop's spotted cow theme, here is a graphic design I gave to shop owner Frank Abdour called "Roth-COW," which is meant to serve as a comical takeoff on abstract artist Mark Rothko's design style.

Feel free to forward this enews to friends and colleagues!
