Artist's statement included with museum piece

When a piece of my art was fortunate enough to be accepted for an art exhibit at the new Peoria Riverfront Museum in downtown Peoria, Illinois, over the past few months, I was asked to send along an artist's statement that coincided with my 40" x 48" painting, "The Promise of Light."

To the right of my artwork is the artist's statement. Something I can almost always promise in nearly every painting is that the painting will reflect hope.

"Friends" HeartART notecards

As enjoyable as it is to paint original pieces of art, it's equally enjoyable to create graphic designs for my HeartART line of personal notecards. Here is my "A friend in need" notecard that you can purchase by the dozen. For details and pricing, email me at

THE PROMISE OF LIGHT

"Using simple color schemes, my pieces often depict both literal and emotional landscapes with touches of light that reflect a quiet, calm serenity.

Ultimately, by combining color scheme, design, and use of title, my aim is to send a message of hope through all my art."

Art on display at Fine Art Show

The First United Methodist Church in downtown Peoria is presently hosting a fine art exhibit featuring nearly 70 local area artists. I was pleased to submit "A Space of Peace" that is painted on a piece of fabric for a little added texture and dimension. While it is a common practice to paint the sun as a symbol of life, purchasers of my work often tell me they are attracted to the touch of red in my art and so I try to incorporate this color into my paintings, too.
